THIRTY MINERS

In This State Lose Their Lives in the Month of September Report Says.

CHARLESTON, Oct. 17.—The list of fatalities in the coal mines of West Virginia during the month of September has just been issued by Earl A. Henry, chief of the Department of Mines, and shows that thirty miners lost their lives in this state last month, a decrease of two from the records of the previous month. The list also shows that falls of coal and slate were responsible for sixteen of the deaths, nine to mine cars, three to motors, one to electrocution and one killed by a railroad car at the tipple.

In the letter accompanying the list, Chief Henry calls attention to the fact that many of these accidents were caused by the carelessness of the men themselves—a lack of discipline on the part of the employees being responsible—and urges that both operators and miners co-operate in an effort to reduce the number of accidents to a minimum. Mine foremen are especially asked to give more attention to conditions at working faces and insist upon proper timbering.

INTERESTING ADVERTISING.

A price-reduction is often referred to, by a merchant, as a "method of advertising." It is, rather, a method of giving vitality and interest to his advertising—which he must always do if he is to make advertising pay.
